

Undergraduate Research Center Workshop Series

How to Publish as an Undergraduate

Join us in our “How to Publish as an Undergraduate” series to learn how to publish your research from start to finish. This workshop is part of the UC Davis Writing Across the Curriculum program and will be led by Matt Oliver, Lecturer with the University Writing Program. By coming to our workshops you will receive valuable tips and guidance on the publishing process. Publishing as an undergraduate student allows you gain excellent skills and become more competitive when applying for graduate and/or professional schools. Attend all four workshops and receive a certificate of completion for the How to Publish as an Undergraduate Series.

TOPICS:

- How to identify appropriate journals in which to publish your work
- The overall structure of an article —what a journal article “looks like”
- Techniques for drafting a new paper from scratch
- Techniques for taking an existing draft or paper and revising it for submission
- How to include relevant sources
- Writing tips
- The publication process—including the standard review process and how reviewers make decisions and give feedback to students

All workshops be held from 4:10pm - 6:00pm in the Student Community Center Meeting Room E. To RSVP for the How To Publish Series go to urc.ucdavis.edu.

How to Publish as an Undergraduate
Tuesday, December 4, 2018

Strategies for Developing Your Article: Thesis, Ideas, and Evidence
Tuesday, February 5, 2019

Techniques for Revising and Editing Your Article
Tuesday, March 5, 2019

Polishing Your Article: Hands-on Editing
Tuesday, May 7, 2019

